Until the baby boomer generation, every home had exactly the same relationship--men went to work and women stayed home and cared for the children. This cookie-cutter existence made adult relationships simple--kids learned their future role by watching their parents. No assembly was ever required.

But baby boomers obliterated the cookie-cutter! They took a two thousand year standard and morphed it into a psychedelic nightmare--every home now has a different relationship model-- most of which don't work. What people thought they had learned by watching their parents has been tossed out like the proverbial baby with the bathwater.

SOULMATES MY ASS will teach you how to make your partner a better person every single day, and how to be their hero, not their zero.
