Chronically ill and facing her death, Tabby is once again in the hospital fighting for her life. No one understands exactly what's going on with her, but she has been in and out of the hospital repeatedly and her family and she fear that her death is upon them.

Until Doctor Taylor appears and has an agenda.

Tabby, freaked out that she is being visited by a ghost that shows her scenes of her life and future on the television, she thinks she has lost her mind. Doc shows her what she has really lost and all she can gain, if only she can heal from the wounds of the past, that keep her from fully living. The possibilities are there, he promises, but she cannot believe that her imaginary friend is anything more than a drug induced hallucination or just her loneliness and need that has brought forth a fantasy she escapes to when asleep or in a coma.

Is Doc for real? Is it possible that what he has shown her and promised wasn't coming from her own broken mind? Within the Aurora Borealis, Tabby learns that her heart heals and expands, but can she experience it all without the magic?
