Dear John with Love Grace is the second novel in the Series, The Last Ambassadors of Love. It the second of four novels in the series. Dear John with Love Grace is her extraordinary story of a past that she remembers from mostly her dreams of an ancient Egyptian past. She knows that she has known him from another time...she remembers and wrote a novel about it. After her accident, and being in a coma in the ICU and having awakened, she is much older now and with the beginnings of MS and fibromyalgia she had written letters titled, Dear John, With Love, Grace, in case one day her memory should fail, the memory of their love would not. Grace wrote her letters to Sebastian, her Dear John letter's to protect his ananimity--but to preserve the love that they once had, so long ago. He finds the letters by accident, and re-reads the letters to his true love, hoping that it will inspire her memory of the love that they once had, and still have. Some days are better than other's. Some days Grace remembers everything. Some days she doesn't know her husband at all. It is a powerful love story that connects across timelessness from a past that is only dared to be remembered in their dreams, connecting them to the now that they are in. True love never dies. And true love stories never have endings. This story is no different. A modern day love story with the power and potential to transform and transcend from the grips of death, to the findings of life, their story will keep you at the edge of yourselves, and the edge of your seats. A book that is hard to put down. A story that is hard to forget, and a legend to be told to be remembered throughout the confines of time...embrace yourselves for Dear John, with Love Grace. Enjoy the read.
