The House Next Door Kelly Davenport

After serving in the Korean War, Hassell “Street” Bradstreet, returns to the only refuge he has ever known, his mother’s house, where he settles into an unassuming existence. Street soon realizes, however, that he is still at war, only this time it’s waged from within. Suffering from inner conflict and post-traumatic stress disorder, Street turns to no avail to the Veterans’ Hospital. After some neighborhood children befriend him, Street begins to believe in the possibility of a normal, full life. When tragedy threatens the house next door, however, Street is the only person who can save the family who lives there. Will he at last find redemption through an act of heroism, or succumb to the demons of his past?
