Nearly a year and a half after his pregnant girlfriend left him for her childhood sweetheart, Ryan Isaacs is finally moving on. He's bought and renovated a three-flat in Bayfield, Wisconsin. Living in a tiny town across Lake Superior from his ex wouldn't be his first choice. Staying near his young son, however, made the decision for him. Life is good. But he definitely doesn't have time for distractions; especially not the beautiful new tenant who's renting the top floor. Not that she'd be interested in him anyway.

Lauren Clark has to focus. After a decade in Chicago, moving to the middle of nowhere was not the next stop she pictured for her career. Years of soothing bridezillas has worn her out. And being left at the altar has her questioning her purpose. She's agreed to fill in for her friend Francois at his post as city events manager while he's on sabbatical for a year. If she has her way, she'll be gone long before then. There would be no point to starting something with the hunky landlord.
