The perfect supplement to any writer's life, this new edition of A Working Writer's Daily Planner is even better than before, packed with more of the information writers need to organize their work schedules, track upcoming deadlines, and learn about grant opportunities, contests, and workshop programs. For 2011 we turned to those who know best what writers want—writers themselves—and asked them what resources they'd find most useful. The result is a unique and indispensable tool that makes it easy for writers to keep track of the practical, business end of writing, leaving more time for them to actually spend writing.

If you're a writer, you'll immediately see the advantage of gathering so much information into one spiral-bound compendium: application deadlines are built right into the calendar, along with spotlights on writing markets and helpful online resources. You'll also find information on writing conferences, advice on formatting manuscripts, suggested readings, and the dos and don'ts of submitting your work to journals, magazines, and literary agents. If there's a writer in your life, this calendar will make the perfect gift.

And because every professional writer needs distractions, we'll sneak in peculiar tales of the writing life, plenty of inspiring art and photos, writing prompts, and, as always, a few surprises too.
