Statistics show that “Biological Fathers” are a rare commodity today in being visible in children lives as they grow from childhood to adulthood. Those that can easily walk away don’t see the value of what their active present will do for their children. Because of this, many are left with the disease of mistaken identity along with feeling somewhat rejected. Those that have been infected by this disease can go through life for a period of time in a state of denial which can result in anger issues, looking for acceptance in all the wrong places and not being stable in making sound decisions. In this book Patsy shares how she experienced many of these challenges and how God brought her through.
