Pornography is a funny subject because it invokes fear, shame and guilt among most people but it's the most natural thing in the world, to want to see naked pictures of people, especially men looking at women because men are aroused by visual stimuli as opposed to a lot of women who want an emotional connection but a lot of women like porn too, with whatever arouses them. It might be good-looking men, pretty women or simply watching people have sex/ make love.

I was brought up in a Polish Catholic family. I was an altar boy but it could not stop my true nature from enveloping my being. I remember being aroused when a friend had some soft-core porn mags in the 1960s. You can't fight what comes naturally. Why do they try to stop it and fill it with shame? Your body tells you to massage your sex organs when you hit adolescence.

That's why mainstream societal forces are wrong when they try to preach abstinence. Teaching abstinence with other people is fine when you're a teenager but they're so vague they don't tell you that you have to naturally release your sexual energy when you come of age. Everybody is scared to talk about masturbation because most of us are ashamed of doing it to ourselves but it's natural and we do it all the time until we die.

If somebody could count the number of orgasms human beings get when they're having sex with someone else versus doing it to themselves, solo sex wins because it's so much easier than having sex with someone else.

When I was about fifteen years old, I used to go to the used bookstore downtown where they sold packages of unsold magazines in plastic wrappers. My brothers tried to make fun of me when they found them but they were doing it to themselves too. Everybody does it but you still see preachers and right-wing advocates speak out against porn, premarital sex, masturbation, etc. when you know they're human beings doing the same things you are.

I always knew I was doing the right thing by exploring my sexuality because it felt natural but society tries to demonize any type of sex for pleasure outside of marriage which includes porn.

A man needs sex all the time to expunge the sperm he's always producing. Some women are horny all the time too.

It's natural to want to be aroused and seek out porn to do it. A sexual orgasm is one of the highest pleasures of life with or without intimacy and love involved.

I've seen great porn with beautiful naked women being sexy and erotic.

I've seen what I think is disgusting porn like simulated rape scenes, coprophilia (people pooping on each other), golden showers (urination), gang-bangs and bukkakee where groups of men do it to one girl which she's doing for money but nobody wants to do stuff like that. They create it to make money even if it's not what I would consider beautiful arousing porn.

A part of the arousal of porn is to see people being humiliated. People get off on seeing other people degrade themselves by doing demeaning things for paltry amounts of money, kind of like selling your soul or some part of your dignity because deep down, even though I watch porn, I intuitively know that human beings were created to do great things, not to screw on film for money. Many porn stars commit suicide. Why?
