Ethics and Theological Disclosures honors distinguished philosopher and professor Robert Sokolowski for his work in phenomenology, the study of the way things present themselves to us in human experience. Robert Sokolowski pioneered the introduction of the phenomenological point of view in areas little explored by American phenomenologists. His work is original not only for its distinctive, lucid style but also for the unique light it casts on some of the most difficult and important of ethical and theological matters.

The essays included in this collection demonstrate the reception and fruitfulness of Sokolowski's analysis of moral action and of his idea of a "theology of disclosure." John Drummond treats Sokolowski's formalization of Aristotle on justice, ending with a consideration of its relation to friendship. Richard Cobb-Stevens and Guy Mansini deal expressly with friendship. Owen Sadlier locates the key philosophical elements of the theology of disclosure. Gerard Jacobitz explores how metaphors function in effecting the revelation of God. James G. Hart explores Sokolowski's theological reflections on the praying self and that self's God. John McCarthy examines the role of reason in displaying the God of creation. John Brough discusses Sokolowski's Eucharistic Presence and the presentational forms of the celebration of the Eucharist. Francis Slade pushes the ethical concerns of the volume into the political sphere and considers the issue of sovereignty. And Sokolowski himself addresses the revelation of the Trinity. The book includes a general introduction to Sokolowski's work and a complete bibliography of his writings.
